

International Society for Gynecologic Endoscopy Platinum Sponsorship

Introduction.

The International Society for Gynecological Endoscopy was established in 1988 and represents gynaecologists from across the world with a major interest in gynaecological endoscopy. It has been established as one of the premier gynaecological surgical associations internationally.

Philosophy.

The aim of the Society is to promote excellent standards of practice amongst its members in the surgical specialty of minimally invasive surgery using either the laparoscope or hysteroscope. The benefits of such an approach include small incisions, shorter hospital stays, good cosmesis, less pain and early return to general duties. The charter of the Society includes the teaching and upskilling of gynaecologists throughout the world and in particular developing countries. The objectives of the Society include: high standards of gynaecological practice, a forum at meetings and via the internet for discussion and on innovation in aspects of gynaecological surgery.

The ISGE runs two scientific meetings annually, one of which is the annual scientific meeting and the second, a regional meeting, with a specific focus on one aspect of gynaecological surgery. This forum on each occasion will provide an excellent opportunity for the exchange of scientific research and publications on gynaecological surgery. The Society will acknowledge individuals who have made an excellent contribution to the field of gynaecological endoscopy both at a national and an international level.

The Society sponsors, with the help of industry, training courses in four zones across the globe.
